

ADR IN PUBLIC LAW

23RD APRIL 2004

CONFERENCE PROGRAMME

9.30 – 9.45	Registration
9.45 – 10.00	Welcome and introductions from conference chair, Kate Markus
10.00 – 10.30	Keynote address by Lord Justice Maurice Kay
10.30 – 11.30	Panel Discussion – what is ADR in the public law arena? Panellists include Brian Thompson, Nick Wikeley and Patrick Birkinshaw.
11.30 – 11.45	Coffee
11.45 – 12.45	Panel Discussion – how can ADR in public law work? Panellists include Anthony Bradley, Margaret Doyle, Daniel Kolinsky, Richard Stein and Colin Stutt.
12.45 – 1.00	Chair's closing remarks

The conference is hosted by Herbert Smith. We are also grateful to Landmark Chambers, who have also provided sponsorship for this event.

The event is accredited with the Bar Council and the Law Society for CPD points.

Please see over for details of the panellists, the venue and a map.

Lord Justice Maurice Kay was the lead judge of the Administrative Court until the start of this year when he became a Lord Justice.

Kate Markus is one of the founders of PLP and chair of the management committee and currently practises at Doughty Street Chambers, specialising in public law.

Panellists

Patrick Birkinshaw of the University of Hull's Law School specialises in European Public Law and has conducted research on internal complaints and grievance procedures.

Anthony Bradley of Cloisters is joint editor of Bradley and Ewing "Constitutional and Administrative Law"; his specialisms include judicial review, the public law of education and the protection of human rights.

Margaret Doyle is a mediator and advisor, and author of the Advice Service Alliance book "Advising on ADR: the essential guide to appropriate dispute resolution".

Daniel Kolinsky from Landmark Chambers specialises in public law, planning and local government. He is also a trained mediator.

Richard Stein is a partner in the Human Rights Department at Leigh Day & Co, specialising in judicial review.

Colin Stutt is the Head of Funding Policy at the Legal Services Commission.

Brian Thompson is based at the University of Liverpool's Law School; his expertise is in ombudsmen, tribunals and complaints systems.

Nick Wikeley is the current holder of the John Wilson Chair in Law at the University of Southampton; he is a deputy Social Security Commissioner and part-time appeal tribunal chairman.

